

17

Art's New Vanguard

If art is like a bucket of fresh milk, then all one has to do is wait a little while for the cream to rise. Over the past year a triad of young gay artists have emerged to signal the arrival of a new vanguard: Scott Hug, Paul Mpagi Sepuya, and Paul Lee. These three New Yorkers (Lee is originally from London) have made waves internationally with their particular brand of smart work underpinned with crosscurrents of sexuality. Hug, a multimedia artist, curator, and publisher of the haute hipster art magazine K48, pokes fun at the ludicrousness of pop culture in pieces like a picture of Paris Hilton above the words "Praise the lord." Sepuya's minimalist photographs of his friends, unclothed and in his bed, explore his closeness to them and their bodies. Lee's work, assemblages of string, washcloths, and aluminum cans printed with figures of men, reference the backroom, bathroom culture of pre-AIDS bacchanalia; an elegy and yearning for a time gone by. NICHOLAS WEIST

FROM LEFT: PAUL MPAGI SEPUYA, SCOTT HUG, AND PAUL LEE. PHOTOGRAPHED BY DANIELLE ST. LAURENT AT THE NATIONAL ARTS CLUB IN NEW YORK CITY. STYLING BY TAI CHI ALFONSO.

FROM LEFT: COTTON TANK TOP BY KRIS VAN ASSCHE; STRIPED COTTON CARDIGAN BY MARC BY MARC JACOBS; DENIM JEANS BY DIOR HOMME BY HEDI SLIMANE. AND NAVY LEATHER SHOES BY PIERRE HARDY. GRAY COTTON T-SHIRT AND LEATHER JACKET BY DIOR HOMME BY HEDI SLIMANE. BLACK DENIM JEANS BY EARNEST SEWEN. SILVER LEATHER SHOES BY DIOR HOMME. AND BLACK STUDDER BELT BY LEATHERMAN NYC. COTTON SHIRT BY KRIS VAN ASSCHE. COTTON T-SHIRT BY MARC JACOBS. BLACK COTTON PANTS BY DICKIE'S. AND BLACK LEATHER SHOES BY PIERRE HARDY. GROOMER: GREG B. AT COLLECTIVE USING NARS.